DORM LIVING

The Best Part of Life

at St. Mary's . . . Your Friends.

Tell a friend!

When it's time to relax . . .

Although a lot of people outside of the college community don't realize it, sometimes the pressure of higher education takes its toll. You need a break, you need to get out, you need to get away from the work (or the people) before you go crazy. You need to relax. Luckily, St. Mary's has a lot to offer in the area of relaxation, and sometimes just a walk around campus will bring you new life. If that isn't enough, there's always the waterfront, or a game of football, tossing a frisbee around, or maybe just crashing in front of the fireplace in lower Charles. And then there are always the weekends, where five days of often intense work give way to 48 hours of near catatonia. So, however you do it, when the pressure is on, take a minute, collect your thoughts, and relax.

Student Leadership at SMC

St. Mary's leadership symposium: not the final frontier, but the beginning of a whole career of leadership positions and upwardly-mobile jobs. Star date, January 29th, 1988. Approximately 75 of the most prominent leaders on the St. Mary's College campus were called together for a creatively engineered leadership symposium, designed to help each student discover his or her leadership style and learn how to develop it to its fullest. The entire residence life staff was in attendance to impart their kernels of wisdom upon the students of the "Star Fleet Academy", as the symposium was called in keeping with the Star Trek theme. After four hours of camaraderie and experimentation with leadership styles, the new "graduates" of the "Academy" were encouraged to use their knowledge to boldly go where no person has gone before and lead their generation in new and prosperous ways.

Leadership Symposium and Q&A Session

Uhh! Harder!

A late September Saturday morning, the sun rises over the campus long before anyone on the campus itself rises. A slight chill hung in the early morning air, but it warmed up quickly as the sun shone down continuously through nearly cloudless skies. This is the beginning of a special day at SMC; the day of riverfest. Some people might call Riverfest a sort of homecoming, but homecomings are for the less fortunate schools that don't have a river, or a waterfront, or the right people to put the other two to good use. At SMC, we have all of these things, and they, together with the sun, give us a chance to enjoy ourselves and spend time with old and new friends.

Student productions

Where do actors go when the mainstage production has a limited, all female cast? To the White room, of course. That was the situation early second semester. The problem was solved by directors Brent Burgess and Bryan Garey when they successfully produced two shows, "Line" and "Zoo Story".

"Line," by Israel Horowitz was a show about five people standing in line, manipulating each other for first place in the line. The five person cast featured Scott Nielson as Flemming, a simple man with simple values; Thane Steilow as Stephan, a warped genius; Tracy Wilson as Molly, a rather promiscuous woman; Michael Mesko as Dolan, a manipulative asshole; and Andrew Durhie as Arnall, Molly's browbeaten husband.

Bryan's show, the well-known "Zoo Story" by Edward Albee is a show about two men and the dialogue they have sitting on a park bench. John Worley turned in an inspiring performance as the slightly deranged Jerry, and Drew Kahl's portrayal of the mild-mannered Peter made the evening special.

Regardless of the complaints of lack of seating and high temperature, the shows were enjoyed by all, exhibiting some of St. Mary's finest acting talent.
